The Lattès example with a diagonal arc blown up.

The Lattès subdivision rule has two tile types, $A$ and $B$. Each tile type is a square, and each is subdivided into four subsquares. This example is obtained from the Lattès subdivision rule by “blowing up” a diagonal arc in the subdivision of tile type $A$. The first four subdivisions of tile type $A$ are shown.